All well and good Partners launch new health strategy -p12&13

Good as GOLD

by Dan Stephens

HUNDREDS of struggling residents have struck gold by getting a job thanks to an innovative royal borough jobs scheme.

The GOLD scheme is a council-run initiative which guards residents against hardship by helping them to gain new skills and work experience so they have a better chance of getting a job.

Since its launch in 2013 nearly 400 residents have benefited - with 73 per cent of participants completing six-month paid work placements and going on to employment as a result.

GOLD, which stands for Greenwich Opportunities Learning and Development, is specially designed for residents who are affected by recent welfare reforms or those involved with the royal borough's Families First programme. The programme offers specific support to residents dealing with issues involving youth crime, antisocial behaviour, high levels of truancy, health concerns or adult unemployment.

Enforce ferry 'Keep Clear' signs

Can someone PLEASE enforce the 'Keep Clear' signs in the road at the Woolwich Ferry roundabout. Yesterday there was an hour delay on the ferry and it was utter chaos with lorries/trucks stopping in the Keep Clear areas consequently blocking traffic coming from Charlton. Perhaps they could be stopped from going on the ferry when there is only one ferry working.

D. Jones, Abbey Wood

● Andy Thompson, TfL's General Manager of London River Services, said: "We are aware of this issue. From next month, it should be significantly reduced with the completion of our £10m upgrade of the ferry infrastructure which will reduce delays and suspensions of the ferry service. We're also improving our liaison with the Metropolitan Police to ensure better enforcement of the rules on yellow box junctions when they become congested."

More signs to ecology park please

YOUR paper recently included a feature telling everyone about the Greenwich Peninsula Ecology Park, the events and educational programmes it runs and the plans for the new classroom to be built on the park (GT September 22). The park also has its own website. But I often come across people who have never heard of the ecology park. I think one of the reasons could be that there are not enough signposts giving directions to the park. There's one at the Greenwich Yacht Club and at The O2 on the Thames Path. But there aren't any at the Oval Square bus stops near to the park, none at North Greenwich station or on the Thames Path from Woolwich. It would be a big help if more signs could be put up. I hope you can help with this matter.

John Bushell, Friend of the Ecology Park, Charlton

● A council spokesperson said:
"The Ecology Park on the Peninsula is a fantastic place and we would encourage residents and visitors to spend time there. We will work with the Friends and the local land owner to see if there is a way to improve signage in a way that doesn't add to street clutter."

Swings into action!

Children's centre opens new nursery

WHETHER it's the swings or the slides, it's all fun and games at the new nursery at the Vista Field Children's Centre.

Families enjoyed fun play sessions with puzzles, books, dressing up, and musical instruments inside, with water and sand play, painting and collage, outside.

The celebration on October 8 marked the launch of a new nursery provision and Councillor John Fahy, the royal borough's deputy leader and cabinet member for children's services, was there to join events including afternoon tea.

The new provision offers nursery care for children aged three months to four years, with places for Together for Twos as well as full fee paying places.

Cllr Fahy said: "The royal borough is committed to offering a wide range of childcare and other support through our children's centres. With GLL and other provider organisations across the borough we are continuing to offer improvements to the services that children's centres are able to offer to families. This new nursery will be greatly welcomed by families in Eltham."

The nursery is run by GLL, which operates leisure centres and libraries in the royal borough, along with 10 children's centres in the east and south of the borough. Beverley Bernstein, strategic lead, South Greenwich Children's Centres at GLL, said:

"This new facility for parents is a really important development for the local community who will have access to our high quality childcare. Children will enjoy the environment we are providing, both in and outdoors, and parents will be assured that their children are in the care of highly qualified, experienced and friendly staff. They will, of course, also be able to continue to use all the other services that the Children's Centre offers."

Primary schools shine in national league tables

ROYAL Greenwich primary schools get a ten out of ten for the three Rs according to the latest Key Stage One results for seven-year-olds.

In reading, writing and maths, Royal Greenwich is in the top ten boroughs in England, for the proportion of pupils achieving Level 2B+ (the higher range of the 'expected standard' for 7 year olds) at Key Stage 1. The Royal Borough is also in the top ten boroughs in England, for the proportion of pupils who exceeded the expected standard, and were assessed as Level 3 or above in all three subjects.

In their assessments for writing, Royal Greenwich pupils came joint first with Central Bedfordshire, for the proportion who achieved Level 3 or above; while for maths the borough came joint second alongside Surrey for the proportion of pupils achieving Level 3 or above.

For reading, the highest performing primary schools were Halstow in Greenwich, Deansfield in Eltham, St Patrick's in Plumstead, Our Lady of Grace RC School in Charlton, and Meridian in Greenwich. Coming top in writing were Brooklands in Blackheath, James Wolfe in Greenwich, Our Lady of Grace, St Mary Magdalene in Woolwich and Deansfield in Eltham. In maths, the top achievers were Deansfield, Halstow, Brooklands, Our Lady of Grace, and St Patrick's.

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for children's services, said: "These are astonishing results – our best ever. Our primary schools have risen to the challenge to do even better than they were doing before. It's a tremendous achievement, and it's all down to total commitment by our head teachers, staff and governors, and most importantly, the children themselves."

● The admissions process for children due to start primary school in September 2016 is open.

This applies to children born between 1 September 2011 and 31 August 2012. Visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/primaryadmissions

The life of pie

Brothers mark 125 years of family business

PIE-EYED: the Mayor Cllr Norman Adams checks out a batch of home bakes with shop manager Jeff Goddard, chief assistant Joanne Cranstoun, the pearly king of Woolwich Clive Bennett and his grandson, pearly prince Ronnie Bennett

by Dick Townsend-Smith

THE borough's Mayor got a taste of traditional London fare when he called in at Goddards pie, mash and liquor restaurant in Greenwich to mark its 125 years as a family business.

Cllr Norman Adams met the staff, including brothers Jeff and Kane Goddard, the fourth generation who now run the business in King William Walk.

It was founded in 1890 by Alfred Goddard in Evelyn Street, Deptford, London, and opened in Greenwich in 1952, the year the Cutty Sark arrived to be moored in dry dock.

Jeff and Kane were introduced into the business at an early age -- both boys were working in the shop at the weekends from 10 years old.

Jeff told GT: "I'm really proud of what we do. When the business reached 100 years old my dad, Dave Goddard, passed away so we couldn't really celebrate. So we are celebrating his life this year, as well as the 125 years since the business started.

"The television show 'Bake-off' has done wonders for us. People like wholesome food that fills you up, so the best times for us are spring and autumn -- when it's hot in the summer most people want cold food.

"Not a lot of businesses can say they are still family-orientated. We get our regulars and the locals, but Greenwich is such a big place for tourists, and they are looking for something traditional. Today, we get every type of person come in. In the last hour we must have had 20 different nationalities -- tourism is getting really massive now in Greenwich."

School makes sure everyone is included

TIMBERCROFT Primary School in Plumstead has won a high-level award for the way it helps children with additional educational needs.

An assessor from the Inclusion Quality Mark organisation spent two days at the school sitting in on lessons, and talking to children, staff, the school council, parents and governors. She wanted to find out what Timbercroft did to meet additional educational needs to see if its work merited award of the mark.

The assessor was so impressed by what she found that she decided the school should be graded as a 'Centre of Excellence for Inclusion' -- the highest award available -- making Timbercroft the first royal borough school with the accolade.

Deputy head Amy Massey, who is also the school's inclusion manager, said: "This means we will be able to have other schools visiting us to see what we do, as well as demonstrating good practice to other schools.

"We work with different agencies, such as education psychiatrists, and see what they recommend. We went outside the borough to do this and to organise the training, and then we then brought it back into the school."

The Inclusion Quality Mark is recognised by schools' watchdog Ofsted and the plaque awarded to Timbercroft is now on show in the main foyer.

placements, GOLD also offers a one-year apprenticeship scheme for young people. So far 288 people have been helped into the placements, with 103 young residents under 25 benefiting from the apprenticeships.

The scheme also provides a range of additional support for residents who need it, including one-to-one help, interview preparation and training, dedicated childcare support, part-time shifts compatible with school hours and supported job-searching.

Mum Lisa was referred to Families First through her son's school and has been working in caretaking with the council for a month. She said: "It was a bit scary but the support was there when I needed it and it's given me a more positive outlook. It's such a valuable experience. It's really improving my confidence, helping me to be more outgoing and giving me focus and direction."

Angela, who was referred by the council's welfare reform team, was selected after an interview with GLLaB, the borough's jobs and training agency. She said: "I am now on a caretaker placement in Abbey Wood. I'm really happy with my job - it's good to be part of a team. The placement is going to help me develop and look after the local environment -- it's important to keep my area clean and clear of rubbish."

Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald, the council's cabinet member for community wellbeing and public health said: "I am proud that the council is successfully supporting local people and tackling the hardships affecting out of work residents hit by the welfare reforms.

"GOLD's innovative approach helps residents gain the skills and experience towards permanent employment and is delivering positive outcomes beyond those seen for similar national schemes."

Summit completely different

YEAR 7 students were treated to a PE lesson with a difference last week (Oct 15) - a thrilling urban mountaineering experience from Up at The O2. The students from Greenwich Free School embarked on an exhilarating roof-top climb across one of London's most iconic landmarks as a reward for their hard work this term.

Dressed in full explorer attire, the young adventurers aged between 11 and 12, discovered a different way of keeping active with a 90-minute expedition across the 350-metre walkway. Upon reaching the viewing platform 52 metres above ground level, the children were welcomed by adventurer Mollie Hughes who is one of Britain's youngest explorers.

Adventurous families can experience urban mountaineering with a climb Up at The O2 this half term.

Benefit fraudsters to pay back £25,000

THREE people have been successfully prosecuted for defrauding the royal borough and are now paying back more than £25,000 they fraudulently claimed.

The three all appeared before Bexley Magistrates earlier this month and their cases, all involving benefit fraud, underline the message that those seeking to deceive the council in this way will be caught and punished.

In the first case Ms Claire Lyel, a 36-year from Woolwich was sentenced to a 12-month community punishment order with a requirement that she undertakes 150 hours of unpaid work, after being found guilty of defrauding the royal borough out of housing benefit of over £5,000.

Investigators from the council's audit & anti-fraud team found that during the period from June 2013 to

by Dan Stephens

September 2014, Ms Lyel had failed to declare her salary increase and that she had fraudulently claimed £5,363.92 in housing benefit. The full amount is now being repaid to the royal borough, and Ms Lyel has also been dismissed from her job.

In the second case Mr Sinniah Sivarajah, aged 65 of Woolwich, was sentenced to a 12-month community punishment order with a requirement that he undertakes 120 hours of unpaid work in the community for having defrauded the royal borough of housing benefit totalling over £14,000. This amount is now being repaid.

Mr Sivarajah had declared his part-time work as a sales assistant at an off-licence since 1998, claiming that he earned £80 a week and was in receipt of Housing Benefit to support his rental payments. However,

Mr Sivarajah failed to declare that he also had several bank accounts that showed a variety of unexplained credits totalling in excess of £125,000 over a period of almost 5 years.

In the third case Mr Arri Omar was sentenced to 16 weeks imprisonment suspended for 12 months, by Bexley Magistrates on October 7, for having defrauded the council of Housing Benefit totalling over £6,270.

Following an anonymous tipoff it was discovered that Mr Omar, formerly of Brinkburn Close in Abbey Wood, had been living in Norway since 2014 not at his council property. Mr Omar, 30, failed to declare he was no longer resident at the council address and continued to receive housing benefit payments, which covered his rent. The property has since been recovered and relet to a family in genuine housing need.

Cllr Maureen O' Mara, the council's cabinet member for anti-fraud, said: "I am appalled by the actions of these people in defrauding the royal borough, particularly as this money is needed by so many people in genuine need within our borough."

"These three cases involve the loss of over £25,000 in benefits and, thanks to the continuous hard work of the royal borough's Internal Audit & Anti-fraud team, these fraudsters have been caught and every penny of the money they defrauded will be repaid."

"I urge other residents to report fraud so that other fraudsters out there can have their time in court."

● If you suspect someone of committing fraud against the royal borough please call 0800 169 6975 or email fraud@royalgreenwich.gov.uk. Any information you give will be treated in strictest confidence.

The Vikings are back!

FORWARD MARCH: The Vikings step up for the medal presentation, right, royal borough council leader Denise Hyland stands to attention with the troops

SOLDIERS from the 1st Battalion The Royal Anglian Regiment – nicknamed The Vikings – are back home at Woolwich Barracks after a year in action across the globe.

The final troops returned last Wednesday (October 14) after a tour of duty supporting Britain's defence interests.

It meant they were reunited with their families and their comrades after months apart. Their efforts were rewarded with the presentation of medals by Greenwich Mayor Norman Adams who also presented medals to the soldiers' children as a token of appreciation.

The Vikings carried out three separate missions overseas and many overseas exercises and commitments. Awards were given to those soldiers who have performed above and beyond the call of duty. The battalion's children also received special medals.

The Vikings are a light role infantry battalion that recruits from Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex and Cambridgeshire. The Woolwich-based unit uses the most up-to-date weapon systems and the most advanced communications available. Troops have been deployed this year on operations in Afghanistan, Mali, and Bulgaria. Others have been involved in military training exercises in Canada, Italy and the Pyrenees.

Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Colonel Dominic Biddick, said: "As part of the NATO Resolute Support mission, this force has protected more than 7,000 coalition personnel providing critical advice and assistance to the government of Afghanistan. I am extremely proud of what our soldiers have achieved."

Greenwich council leader Denise Hyland, who also attended the welcome home event, said: "We all take pride in the role that our armed forces play and we are pleased to welcome back this special regiment, which has become an important part of our community."

Air cadets are high flyers

WELL LANDED: Corporal Ethan Whitelaw receiving the Sir Alan Lees Trophy on behalf of 56 (Woolwich) Squadron from Air Commodore Dawn McCafferty

Air cadets in Woolwich have won a major national award, after beating more than a thousand other squadrons to be judged the best in the country.

The 56 (Woolwich) Squadron were this year's winners of the prestigious Sir Alan Lees Trophy. It was presented by Air Commodore Dawn McCafferty, Commandant of the Royal Air Force

Air Cadets, at a ceremony in the Conference Centre at Woolwich Barracks.

Watched by their families, around 40 air cadets were given certificates by VIP guests who included the Mayor of Royal Greenwich, Cllr Norman Adams. The squadron was also awarded a grant of £3,000.

One of the air cadets taking part was Saintgeorge Edwards, who is an apprentice in the council's human resources team. She said: "It was a really good event. Everyone got a certificate for the effort they had put in. I've been a cadet for four years, and the best part is meeting people and the opportunities that being in the cadets brings. I've been flying, gliding, I'm a qualified first aider, I've played hockey and I've gained a gold Duke of Edinburgh Award. My squadron regularly perform and help out at local events such as the Tall Ships Festival and Armed Forces Day, as well as raising funds locally."

The air cadets meet every Tuesday and Friday evening in the Greenhill Road army building next to Woolwich Barracks.

Trafalgar Day service

THE MAYOR of Greenwich joins a Trafalgar Day remembrance service on Saturday (October 24). The event starts at 12 noon at the memorial in the East Greenwich Pleasaunce and all are welcome. The remains of some of those who died in the battle of Trafalgar 210 years ago are buried in the East Greenwich Pleasaunce.

A salvation army band will provide the music and the Church of England East Greenwich Ministry Team will preside over the Act of Remembrance. There will be standard bearers from the Royal Naval Association and the Deptford and Greenwich Sea Cadets will parade. Wreaths will be laid by the mayor, the deputy Lord Lieutenant and representatives from the WRNS and other local organisations. The Greenwich branch of the Royal Naval Association will be attending the event together with residents from Trafalgar Quarters. The event is supported by the Friends of East Greenwich Pleasaunce.

The Revd Margaret Cave, team Rector said: "We are delighted that this Act of Remembrance will continue despite the sad death earlier this year of ex naval serviceman Terry Stacey who organised the event for many years."

Everyone benefits in rented homes improvements scheme

CALLING all landlords or property owners who need a helping hand to let their houses or flats to tenants.

The Royal Borough of Greenwich wants to encourage more landlords to lease their property to the council, so that it can house people who are in housing need. In return, the council will give a grant of up to £15,000 so any necessary repairs or improvements can be carried out on the property.

If the upgrading costs are more than £15,000, the council can provide an interest-free loan of up to another £20,000 to help pay for the work. Grants may also be available for properties that are to be let for multiple occupation.

In return, rents must be set at a rate that is affordable for tenants receiving housing benefit, and the property must continue to be let for the next three years. If it becomes empty during that time, landlords must agree to accept tenants nominated by the council.

One landlord who signed up to the scheme is Mark Doyle, who owns several shared houses in the borough and rents out rooms privately. He had worked with the council to provide emergency accommodation and short tenancies, and was looking to improve two of the properties that needed updating.

He worked with the council to convert a house in Plumstead Common Road into three one-bedroom flats and three self-contained units with bathroom and cooking facilities. The project is costing around £125,000 and the council is giving him a grant of £50,000 towards the cost, in return for securing the units for future use.

As a result of the project's success, Mr Doyle has agreed a similar arrangement for a second property, which will be converted to six self-contained units. Work is due to start once the first project is finished.

Mr Doyle said: "The grants scheme is a good one because landlords can get a grant to refurbish properties to a high standard. It has helped me provide good accommodation for people who need it. There is a need for accommodation, both council and private, to house people, and this helps to the accommodation available. I would definitely recommend this scheme to other landlords."

Cllr Chris Kirby, the council's cabinet member for housing and human resources, said: "This collaboration will result in high-standard accommodation being made available to the council to house vulnerable people on housing benefit who need to find good quality, private rented accommodation at an affordable rent. The scheme is designed to help reduce the council's use of high-cost, private sector placements to provide emergency accommodation for homeless people."

Shaken and stirred by Bond music concert

EIGHTY-five elderly Caribbeans were shaken and stirred by a rousing concert featuring music from the James Bond movies.

Members of the Caribbean Social Forum were treated to a matinee concert at the Royal Albert Hall earlier this month as part of their weekly activities.

The visit was part of the Royal Albert Hall's Friendship Matinee, a specially-programmed performance for those who would not otherwise have the opportunity to go to the Hall. This year's concert featured The Music of Bond with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the secret service agent.

Special priced tickets are available to people who are part of a charity, community or voluntary organization – and visitors had the chance to see a world-class show for just £5 per ticket.

The Caribbean Social Forum was the second biggest group at the event, outnumbered only by a 100-strong group from the Salvation Army.

The Albert Hall arranged a special front ofhouse tour and a reception for the group. The forum was set up in January offering support, social activities and outings to people over 50 in the Greenwich and Lewisham area.

Lucy Noble, director of events at the Royal Albert Hall said: "It was part of Prince Albert's founding vision of the Hall to provide access to the arts for all, and there's no better example of our ongoing dedication to his legacy than the Friendship Matinee. We're committed to providing opportunities for those who wouldn't normally get the chance to visit a famous concert venue or watch a renowned orchestra such as the Royal Philharmonic, and seeing what the event meant to those who came along this year was an extremely moving and powerful experience."

● Internationally acclaimed photographer Charlie Phillips, known for his portraits of African Caribbean community in 60s London, gave a presentation on his work at Woolwich Central Baptist Church on October 16 as part of the Forum's activities for Black History Month.

● The forum hosts a talk on dementia care at the Tramshed today (October 20) from 12.30-2.30pm. It usually meets on Thursdays at the Tramshed, 12-3pm. Tel: 0844 357 3700.

Adoption parents wanted

THIS week is National Adoption Week, and a special evening event is being planned to help people who want to adopt a child to find out more.

Organised by the council's adoption team, it's in The Gallery at the Woolwich Centre in Wellington Street on November 26, from 7pm to 9pm. Information about adoption will be provided, and people can ask questions.

There is a particular need at the moment for adoptive parents for children aged three and upwards, and a local need for people willing to take sibling groups. Skills and patience, and an understanding that adopted children have special care needs are required.

Kick the habit

SO far over 3,800 smokers have been advised on how to kick the habit half way through Stoptober - the month-long stop smoking campaign.

More than 700 have gone on to get further advice and so far, 153 have signed up for the 28-day Stoptober Challenge and promised to quit smoking either at a drop in clinic, pharmacy or GP surgery.

The campaign took centre stage at The Valley, Charlton Athletic's ground, earlier this month ahead of the club's home clash with Fulham.

Stop smoking advisers from the Charlton Athletic Community Trust (CACT) spoke with fans outside the ground offering advice, smoking-related health checks and information on quitting. They also signposted people to the Stoptober challenge, which encourages people to aim for 28 days without a cigarette. And they reminded smokers that it is now illegal to smoke in vehicles with someone under 18 present.

The Stoptober team were joined on the pitch by council leader Denise Hyland, deputy leader John Fahy and the Mayor of Greenwich, Norman Adams.

Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald, the royal borough's cabinet member community wellbeing and public health, said: "Research shows that those who give up for around a month are five times more likely to quit for good. Stoptober highlights a range of techniques and support to help smokers quit. It's great that so many people have used the Stoptober campaign as an impetus to give up."

Rare chance to visit historic woodlands

by Dick Townsend-Smith

NEARLY 400 people went along when the Friends of Westcombe Woodlands hosted an open day on the six-and-a-half acre piece of historic woodland they manage.

The event celebrated the official opening of a steel gate, newly-installed to give access to the site, which is usually closed to visitors. The ceremony was carried out by the Woolwich and Greenwich MP Matthew Pennycook. Also there were the Mayor and Mayoress, Cllr Norman Adams and Serena Lovelace, and council leader Cllr Denise Hyland.

The Woodlands Trust leased the woods to the Friends, who have been caring for them since 2012. Frank Smith, their vice-chairman, said the open day was a rare opportunity for the community to look round the green area in the heart of Westcombe Park just above Maze Hill Station.

He said: "We had almost 400 people throughout the day, with a nature quiz in the afternoon for families and children. Everyone said what a wonderful event it was. It couldn't have gone better, and the weather was terrific."

He added: "The Friends of Westcombe Woodlands was formed to work in the woods to improve the biodiversity and carry out planting. We got permission to put the specially-made metal gate in the fence. We can't open the woods to the public for safety reasons, but we do have a few open days a year, plus monthly volunteer sessions for people to come in and work with us to make improvements."

Campaign for a healthy

A major campaign has been launched to improve the health and wellbeing of people in Royal Greenwich over the next three years. Obesity and mental health are top of the list for action. Councillors, health leaders and community groups have pledged to work together to get results.

MORE than 100 people representing health and public services, community organisations, businesses, schools, colleges and community groups, got together for the official launch of "Healthy Greenwich, Healthy People" – a new health campaign, last Wednesday (October 14).

It was held at The Valley, Charlton, with council leader Cllr Denise Hyland (pictured right) chairing the conference. The local Health and Wellbeing Board pinpointed obesity and improved mental wellbeing as areas to focus on to prevent wide-ranging poor health, disability and even premature death in the coming years.

A key theme of the strategy is that tackling obesity and improving mental wellbeing needs efforts from many people and organisations. For example, employers are being encouraged to help reduce stress in the workplace, while the council is promoting walking and cycling.

Cllr Hyland said: "Obesity and poor mental health have a huge impact on the lives of the individuals and on their families. They also place enormous pressures on health and social care services at times of reducing budgets.

"The council and our health partners share a determination to tackle these issues. We already support several successful projects that are making an important difference to people's lives. But there is a pressing need to step up our efforts, and we are committed to increasing the scope and range of services, and to work even more closely with the local community to help people turn their lives around."

Dr Ellen Wright, Clinical Chair of NHS Greenwich Clinical Commissioning Group

(CCG), and Vice-Chair of the Greenwich Health and Wellbeing Board, said: "The job of any GP is to help people get healthy and stay healthy. There are no easy solutions to issues such as obesity or poor mental health, but the best way to deal with complex health problems is when GPs, the community and voluntary sector, the council, local employers and educational institutions, and patients all work together. The NHS in Greenwich is fully behind the new 'Healthy Greenwich, Healthy People' strategy. It is a blueprint setting out what all of us in the borough need to do in order to achieve real health improvements."

Help with mental health

ONE in four people will have mental health problems at some time in their lives. And organisations in the borough agree that mental health concerns everyone, whether it is about a diagnosis or maintaining good mental health through life's ups and downs.

A week of special activities took place in the borough to mark World Mental Health Day on Saturday, October 10, climaxing with a day of music, dance, celebration and information about mental wellbeing in Woolwich. Greenwich Mind provides online information about how people can look after their mental wellbeing through its 'Feelgood Greenwich' website at www.feelgoodgreenwich.co.uk. Local organisations offering help include:

Greenwich Time to Talk which aims to increase access to talking therapies, at www.oxleas.nhs.uk/services/service/gttt

The Big White Wall, which provides support through a safe online community guided by trained professionals at www.bigwhitewall.com

The Recovery College in Woolwich which provides educational courses designed to improve wellbeing, create shared learning experiences and development opportunities. It is at www.recoverycollegegreenwich.org

Oxleas NHS Trust has set up, HeadScape a referral and self-help website to provide support for range of mental health issues that may be affecting children and young people. It is at www.headscapegreenwich.co.uk

You can also find out more about any of these by calling the Feel Good line on 07557 230560

MORE than 450 students have enrolled in courses at the Recovery College in Woolwich since it opened nearly a year ago. It operates as a charity that offers community-based support to local people with mental health problems, and is run by Bridge Mental Health.

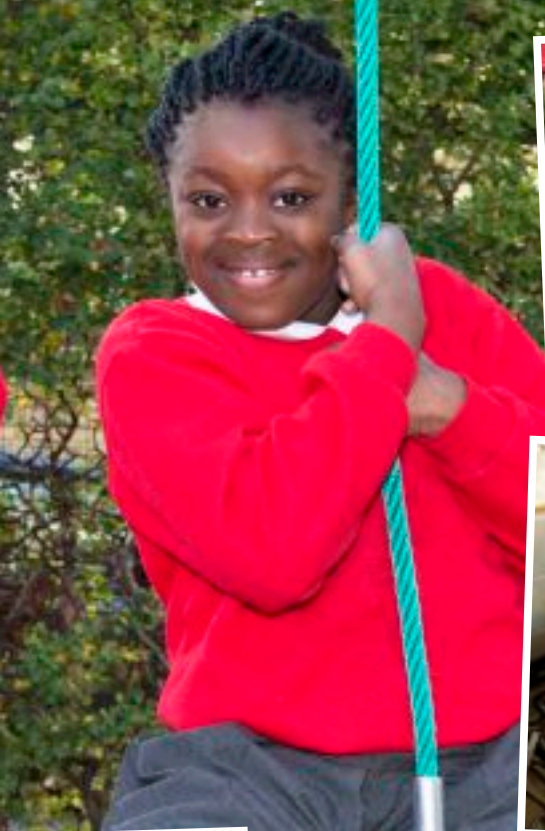

Nearly four out of every five staff members have lived the experience of mental health problems, and they work with the students to deliver courses which help with their recovery. Workshops include assertiveness and improving self-esteem. Many students have gone on to jobs or further training through partnership as a result.

Student Angela said: "I've taken the assertiveness, IT and courses. These have been able to produce a support group I am affected by substance abuse. The college has made me even more confident in the confidence to achieve. The tutors are so caring with mental health like this college in our Student Tanya said: "I am a person but this college from a mainstream college very friendly and you pretend to be anyone - if I'm having a bad day, and the supportive."

Health partners tackle obesity

OBESITY is one of the biggest causes of preventable illness and death. It increases the risk of diabetes, heart disease and liver disease.

Several projects are running in the borough to help tackle obesity. They include:

Greenwich Get Active, which organises thousands of physical activity sessions for people. Since 2012 it has signed up more than 7,500 people.

Good Food in Greenwich which is a network of businesses, individuals and organisations working towards a fairer, healthier, more sustainable food system.

Greenwich Community Cookery Clubs, a free, open access, cook and eat programme delivered as a course of weekly sessions over five weeks.

The Healthier Catering Commitment, which signs up food outlets and cafes to improve the food they sell by making small changes such as offering healthier options.

Targeted courses for families with overweight children at leisure and children's centres.

SCHOOLS play an important role in helping to keep children fit and physically active. One that is totally committed is Cardwell Primary in Frances Street, Woolwich.

It has organised workshops from Paralympian Andy Barrow, a wheelchair basketball tournament, a sponsored skip, football training, and a visit from Charlton Athletic player Callum Harriott. Pupils and staff volunteered their time to make the events a big success.

The school was commended by the London Mayor when they won the award for sports and healthy living in this year's Team London Schools Awards. They were one of six winners chosen from a thousand London schools.

Headteacher Carol Smith said: "It's about looking after whole child to ensure they are in a healthy condition physically and mentally to achieve their best potential, both academically and socially. We have just had a new playground finished, and that will encourage more sport and other things that make you healthy, such as walking and cycling."

Halls host heritage fair

LONG before William Webster built the Halls in 1895, music, theatre and dance events were held at various venues around Blackheath Village. In celebration the Blackheath Society has joined the Friends of Blackheath Halls to host a special programme to mark an important element of local history.

The society and the Friends are sponsoring two events and an exhibition celebrating 200 years of entertainment in Blackheath.

The first is a talk by local historian Neil Rhind in the Halls' Recital Room at 8pm on Wednesday October 28, illustrated with images from the society's collection and the archives of Trinity Laban and Blackheath Halls. There's also an exhibition featuring posters, performers and venues which continues in the Recital Room until November 6 from 10am to 5pm.

"Together the events celebrate the cultural history of Blackheath. Amateur dramatics and local opera, Turkish bazaars, scientific demonstrations, popular singing and roller-skating have all been popular pastimes over the years and local residents made a huge and lasting contribution to Blackheath's social and cultural life," Neil explained. Tickets for the talk and the exhibition, including wine at pre-talk reception at 7pm, can be bought for £15 from Blackheath Halls box office.

On Friday October 30 there's a reception and supper in the Great Hall followed by a celebratory evening's entertainment. Tickets are £35 per person or £300 for a table of 10.

SCENE

PRATCHETT and Shakespeare and a directorial debut – it's a remarkably ambitious and brave effort for Charlton's Alexandra Players which kicks off a four-night run of their latest production next week.

Wyrd Sisters is Book VI of Discworld, Pratchett's epic, his personal soapbox for satire. It was first adapted for stage, with Pratchett's permission, in 1991 by author and Discworld fanatic, Stephen Briggs, who has subsequently adapted other Discworld scripts.

"It's totally different but I can't wait to see our ideas brought to life," said first time director Claire Sweetapple.

The setting, a planet the shape of a disc atop elephants riding a turtle, pushed Claire's design team to the limits. "The technical team were amazing, their creations are truly triumphant," Claire added. With 23 scenes for over 30 different characters, it's perhaps the Players' most pioneering production to date. "It was stretching," recalled design chief, Dave Townsend, "but everyone gave a hand."

Notwithstanding echoes of Hamlet and King Lear, the narrative resonates Macbeth. With a ghost and three witches – Granny Weatherwax, Nanny Ogg and Magrat Garlick – to add to the fun, there's barely a pause between breaths. "There's something for everyone and I'll be bringing my 6-year-old daughter," Claire added brightly. She was remarkably calm, given it's her directorial debut but

Haunting memories

A NEW, original and spooky production is set to debut in the royal borough just in time for Halloween. YODO: You Only Die Once, a tale of paranormal activity, ghostly apparitions and beyond-the-grave drama is produced by the Roan Theatre Company.

The story involves Ella, the presenter of a paranormal investigation show who gets more than she bargained for when she is killed in a tragic accident at a haunted manor house. While adjusting to her new 'life' as a ghost, the show's resident psychic plots to use Ella's death to boost show ratings. Writer and director Stuart Mitchell-Smith said: "This is a new and original production - we welcome residents and visitors from further afield to enjoy what promises to be an exciting and memorable show. The Roan Theatre Company really is a hidden gem in our local area, operating at the club venue in Kidbrooke and the Bob Hope Theatre in Eltham. As a group we are interested in supporting the entire creative process within amateur theatre and getting local people involved with what we do - all are welcome. We are also dedicated to providing affordable tickets to the local community."

YODO will be performed at the Roan club venue (Roan School Playing Fields Kidbrooke Park Road London SE3 9NF) at 7.45pm on October 23, 26, 28 and 30. Tickets £5, on 079411 36985 or email rtcticketline@gmail.com, visit www.theroantheatrecompany.com

THE UK's only museum dedicated to the history of fans opens its door for late visitors as part of Museums at Night next Friday (October 30). The museum will be open from 6-9pm allowing visitors to view its latest exhibition 'Made in China' which traces the evolution of Chinese export fan design from the end of the 17th century to its decline in the late 19th century. A display of over 80 fans shows how Chinese painters and makers responded to demand from the west for luxury goods of Chinese manufacture.

Museum founder Helene Alexander and curator Jacob Moss will be hosting an action-packed evening with short talks, guided tours and demonstrations of Chinese paper cutting. The evening event is part of a twice-yearly campaign by cultural publisher Culture24 which invites museums, galleries and heritage sites to open their doors after hours to showcase their treasures in unexpected ways. The Fan Museum is at 12 Crooms Hill, Greenwich, normal admission charges apply, visit www.thefanmuseum.org.uk

- Revisions to the priority groups within the Allocations Scheme
- Changes to the groups that can be excluded or suspended from the Housing Register

Full details of the Allocations Policy can be found on the Royal Borough's website at:

health and education activities for young people across the borough. It means they'll have access to the same premiere sporting facilities as club players.

The council approved the club's plans for a total overhaul of the club's facilities, including a brand new three-storey building and the complete renovation of pitches. These will have both natural and synthetic surfaces for the club's players at all levels.

The club worked with the nearby University of Greenwich and Footscray Rugby Club on plans for the new training ground, which will have all-weather playing surfaces.

Building work on the new main building is set to begin in April next year, with a completion date scheduled for summer 2017, ready for the start of the 2017/18 season.

Club owner Roland Duchâtelet, who has been heavily involved with the design of the new facilities, said: "Plans have been progressing for a long time and now we can finally say, that this is great news for the future of Charlton Athletic. We will be able to offer state-of-the-art facilities for our players, staff and for our academy which will bring long-term benefits to Charlton and the development of our players."

Cllr Miranda Williams, the council's cabinet member for culture and creative industries, said: "Both Charlton Athletic and Charlton Athletic Community Trust are really important partners in the local sports community. Both organisations have really strong community links and it's great that this investment will support both the club and facilities for the community."
